CATARRHAL FEVER

Breaks Out in Bourbon and Several Horses Succumb.

Catarrhal fever or "black tongue," a disease which has been raging among horses of adjoining counties has broken out in Bourbon and seems to have assumed the proportions of an epidemic.
Miss Frances Champ yesterday lost a valuable Shetland pony which was stricken with the disease last Friday and Mr. W. W. Titus, the well-known trotting horse trainer, lost three valuable animals last week as a result of the disease.
A valuable carriage horse belonging to Mr. J. T. Hinton was stricken with the disease only a few days ago, died Sunday and there are a large number of cases among horses that have been reported.
Mr. M. J. Murphy also lost a very valuable mare last week as a result of the disease. H. Margolen lost one and W. G. Talbot two last week.
Veterinarians seem unable to cope with the situation owing to the nature of the disease, which is exceedingly malignant and contagious. It prevails in several of the adjoining counties and in many cities livery stables have been placed in quarantine. The matter has been called to the attention of the State Department of Agriculture and Commissioner Newman issued an order to all liverymen in an effort to check the spread.

WOMEN ENTITLED TO VOTE.

The Court of Appeals handed down Friday, an opinion in the mandamus case of Mrs. Nannette McDowell Bullock, a candidate for County School Superintendent of Fayette county, holding that the Circuit Court was the court of final jurisdiction in the administration of the primary law.
Mrs. Bullock filed a petition with County Clerk Theo. Lewis, of Fayette, who rejected it because the signatures were mainly those of women. Mrs. Bullock brought suit for a mandamus to require the acceptance of her petition and place her name on the ballot, and this was decided in her favor. In deciding the appeal brought by the county clerk, the opinion "regrets that the question cannot be definitely settled in this case."
